

The house that words built

edited by Ioana Petrescu & Kasey Kilgariff

with Paul Skrebels, Megan Bruff, Fiona Eshmade, Sean Hilton, Ellen Rayner, Jessica Sullivan and Hayley Timms

This book is the second in a series of books produced at UniSA based on the principle of linking theory with practice.

The student editors designed rooms for chapters and filled the space with stories they believed suited the house that words built. The Stairs help movement within the house, so they placed on the stairs the stories that have in them a sense of movement. The Rumpus Room houses textual interventions in classical fairy tales. The Bedroom hosts stories of relationships; the Attic features stories of light and shade. The Basement houses detective stories and thrillers. The book ends on a humorous tone with the Garden Shed outside the house, a place without which no Aussie house would be complete.

Putting a short story book in the hands of the community of readers, UniSA Professional and Creative Writing students combine old and new requirements of the academy, offering a marketable product that showcases their writing skills, but which is also a collection of contemporary Australian writing that hopes to teach, delight and move in the age-old writerly spirit of literary creation. UniSA Professional and Creative Writing students and lecturers invite readers to share the experience and live for a while in the house that words built.
