

Grapevine Rootstocks

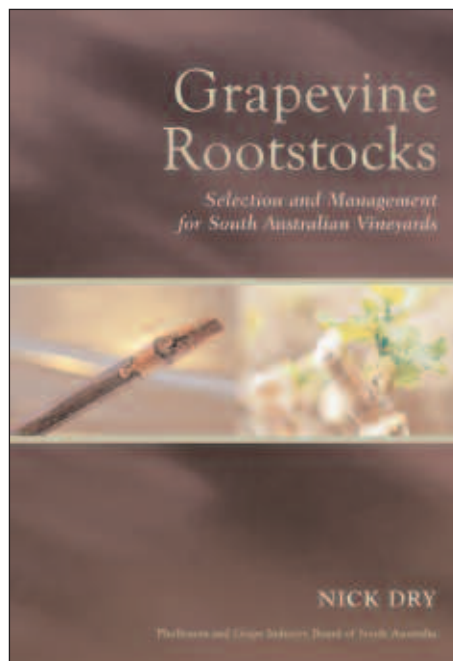

Selection and Management for South Australian Vineyards

by Nick Dry

This book is an essential reference for Australian grapegrowers seeking to maximise the performance and profitability of their vineyard.

Rootstocks are an undervalued management tool in Australia, habitually ignored despite their potential to provide viticultural benefits to growers in warm and cool climate vineyards. Too often the prevailing perception is that choosing a suitable rootstock for a particular vineyard site is hyper-complex and to be avoided. This publication will give growers, viticulturists and vineyard managers all the information necessary to make appropriate rootstock choices for their specific site and climate.

This publication is the culmination of three years of data collection and observations of rootstock performance in commercial vineyards across the major viticultural regions of South Australia. It has been written by viticulturist Nick Dry working as the rootstock researcher for the Phylloxera and Grape Industry Board of South Australia.
